STUNTS or SKILLS

Perhaps it was inevitable, but we must now face it - the decorative leathercraft field may at last enjoy "the greatest aid ever offered the craft" - in the form of plastic templates for reproducing decorative motifs

We are now on a par with the fine arts field, currently "enjoying" its greatest boon to budding artists - with its pre-sketched oil paintings which offer "everything the customer needs - including the talent to do an original"

Let's examine this "greatest aid ever offered leathercraftsmen" which claims to eliminate tedious tracing and transferring; indent patterns accurately; be ideal for classroom use, fool-proof, simple, easy, and suggests the templates will enable novices to reproduce work exactly like the originating artist's

In other words, novices are led to believe they may become master craftsmen by avoiding practise of skills necessary to produce examples of truly worth while leathercraftsmanship

This misnamed "aid" to leathercraftsmen may fool beginners for awhile, commercially it may enhance sales for manufacturers and suppliers; but it will hardly stir more than momentary and disapproving interest among serious students of leathercraft. Products of such aids will display their lack of true craft skills. It is hoped important suppliers to the Canadian leathercraft field will use discretion before deciding to adopt such dubious "aids to leathercraft"

Major competitive exhibitions could not condone exhibits produced through such aids, since items representing minimum, rather than maximum capacities are unimportant and valueless in open competition. Commercial values of such "craft aided" products, if set any higher than chain store values for similar mass-produced items, would react most unfairly against work by serious craftsmen, and would prove misleading to the purchasing public

Trick aids, such as are being offered our field, confirm the observation of our Governor-General, Rt Hon Vincent Massey, who, when speaking recently at the convocation of the University of Western Ontario, cautioned: "The great menace of civilization in the present is that we offer an education with too little regard for the roots" That modern services are "alarmingly given to short cuts"

Also, Sydney Harris, the American columnist and art critic: "Instead of trying to meet the rigorous standards of a craft, many try to excite the public with stunts that look spectacular to the untrained eye, but are usually devoid of any artistic merit"

STUNTS or SKILLS -- The Choice is Ours

First CSCL Fellow and Associate Members Named

Eight members of CSCL have the honor to be chosen as the first group of Fellows in the Society; and eight members have been chosen as the first group of Associates in the Society

Fellows and Associates were decided in a confidential vote, suggested by the Canadian Arts Council as being used in other societies for a like purpose. Each member of the Executive and Executive Council was invited to submit a list of candidates deemed worthy of this honor in the Society. A composite list of the most-mentioned names was then prepared by the Secretary, and this list mailed back to each member of the Executive and Council for their confidential vote of eight Fellows and eight Associates. Elections were guided by the sections of our Constitution which read:

"Qualifications for Associate and Fellow Membership shall be based on meritorious achievement in the craft, and active participation in furthering the objectives of the Society, which include:

- to encourage originality of design
- to establish high standards of craftsmanship
- to advance education in the art
- to participate in exhibitions

The Executive and Council have much pleasure in conferring the Society's highest honors on the following worthy members who have been untiring in their efforts to further the interests of their Society:

FELLOWS

| TYRELL, Jessie      | - | Ottawa   |
| VILLMANN, Iiva      | - | Toronto  |

Fellows will be asked to sit on the first Board of Selection at the forthcoming Annual Meeting, when work will be received from other members for further Fellow or Associate rating. Members are invited to submit two small and two large leathercraft projects of high standard. Submissions should be sent to Mrs R K Larmour, 59 High Park Boulevard, prepaid, NOT LATER than June 1

COMPETITION in Natural Grained and Marked Leathers

(a News-Item Article by Deane Russell)

Interest in the Competition for Best Use of Natural Grained or Marked Leathers is rapidly gaining momentum among Canadian leathercraftsmen

Since the competition was first mentioned in the last issue of "Canadian Leathercraft" four prominent Canadian leathercraft supply houses have volunteered to co-operate in offering cash awards to craftsmen producing best examples of articles showing natural grained or marked leathers

The Executive of CSCL are pleased to acknowledge the friendly co-operation of the following leathercraft suppliers as co-sponsors donating awards:

|------------------------------------|---|-----------|
| Bedford Fine Leathers, Ltd         | - | Vancouver |
| Corbeil-Hooke, Inc                 | - | Montreal  |
| Lewis Craft Supplies, Ltd          | - | Toronto   |
| Ottawa Valley Leathercraft Studios | - | Ottawa    |

For this competition, believed to be the first of its kind among Canadian leathercraftsmen, awards at present total: 1st $15.00 2nd $10.00 3rd $5.00

To help craftsmen get into the spirit of the game, we offer the following suggestions:

Several types of "natural grained or marked leathers" commonly confront students of leathercraft. These may be:

- 1) Shoulder Graining - light, medium, or deep, depending upon tannery finishing. When Shoulder Graining is not too pressed or rolled out, some interesting uses suggest themselves for such leather (see below)
- 2) Natural Growth Marking - to be found in many skins or hides which have enjoyed most healthy growing conditions. Often the very best skins and hides display "fat growth graining"
- 3) Drawn Graining - sometimes induced by drum tannage, when leather is tumbled and becomes slightly wrinkled into cross-check markings. Even though well-smoothed out, such markings often show up in natural russet leathers
- 4) Natural Veining - occasionally hides display an interesting pattern of natural veining - considered desirable and valuable for large-area leather coverings, as for table top finishing, boxes and lamp bases
- 5) Healed Scar Markings - from cuts suffered by animals during normal growth. Well-healed scars do not detract from the strength nor practical uses of leather, but, unfortunately, are too often considered as just "scrap" by beginners who will not experiment with it. Leathercraftsmen, if not interested in using "healed scar" leather without further embellishment, may combine such pieces with leather under type 6)(immediately below)
- 6) Assisted Graining - effects which craftsmen may give certain pieces of leather in order to make them more attractive for special uses - even though they may contain one, or more of above suggested grainings or markings (see note x)

Suggestions for using natural or assisted grained leathers:

By looking for and experimenting with leather which is not entirely "blemish free" craftsmen may set themselves different and economical projects. Rather than becoming too quickly discouraged at "first-glance" discoveries of natural grained or marked leathers, craftsmen might do well to study these areas carefully and consider how they may be turned to good advantage

We should learn to practise a trick of experienced cabinet makers. If a skilled cabinet maker were to become as easily discouraged by his first glance at grain-ing in natural mill-finished woods, he would lose many chances for finishing woods with effects which may set his work apart from the work of "run-of-the-mill" fellow woodworkers. Experience has taught him to look beyond the dull, flat appearing newly-milled wood, until he can conceive exciting possibilities for "bringing out the grain" rather than obliterating it with heavy pigments and too much ornamentation

So may instructors of leathercraft encourage their students to learn how to "bring out the grain of good leathers" Skill in leather finishing will help craftsmen to salvage and, indeed, turn to good account, many pieces of otherwise "scrap leather" Learn to see the possibilities of grained or marked leathers: learn to accent, rather than hide, certain grainings and markings, and you will enjoy your craft more

HOW MAY NATURAL GRAINED and MARKED LEATHERS BE USED? We suggest --

- first try something simple but effective, such as: a book cover. Prepare a paper pattern for area of leather needed and turn it around on your grained or marked leather until you see the most interesting direction for "bringing out the grain"
  - then try selecting grains or markings which will appropriately "decorate" the front, back or flap panels of otherwise "undecorated" handbags
  - look for pieces suitable for panels or covers of lamp bases, boxes or desk set items
  - many pieces, not considered quite suitable for the finer examples of personal leather goods, can be used for items of outdoor sports equipment: belts, belt-bags; axe, knife and gun sheaths, archery quivers, wrist guards, etc.
- (*) Watch the next issue of "CL" for helpful and interesting suggestions for craftsmen who will experiment with "Assisted Graining" -- the old and successful skill among craftsmen who have learned to get the most out of such a natural product as "genuine leather"

START LOOKING NOW for Natural Grained or Marked Leather. Make up articles during the summer months and be ready to enter your examples by September 15. Results and awards will be reported in the first issue of "Canadian Leathercraft" Volume III

LEATHER DOOR PLATES

by

Elizabeth Arnold - CSCL Member, Kirkland Lake

Necessity has been the mother of many inventions, and so began my door plates. Having moved into an apartment with several entrances, I felt my friends needed some assurance before knocking on yet another door

This plate was made of 3½oz natural cowhide, later mounted on brown morocco to add firmness and color contrast against the door. This mounting has not been necessary with larger and heavier plates made later

A draft was made on paper, marking off the centre area for the name with a double line separating it from the border area. The width depends on size of letters and length for number of letters used. I usually leave the right of the sketch open until the name is filled in, then, complete it. This avoids having to centre the name and makes it easier to get even spacing

In this first plate I incised single line letters then bevelled left and upper sides of each stroke. Basket and seed stamps were alternated across top and bottom borders. Camouflage and plain seeders were combined at the ends and a moroccan seeder was stamped in each corner and a fine veiner stamped right through the leather to give a scalloped finish to each end. Over all a coating of Antique was applied and the mounting completed

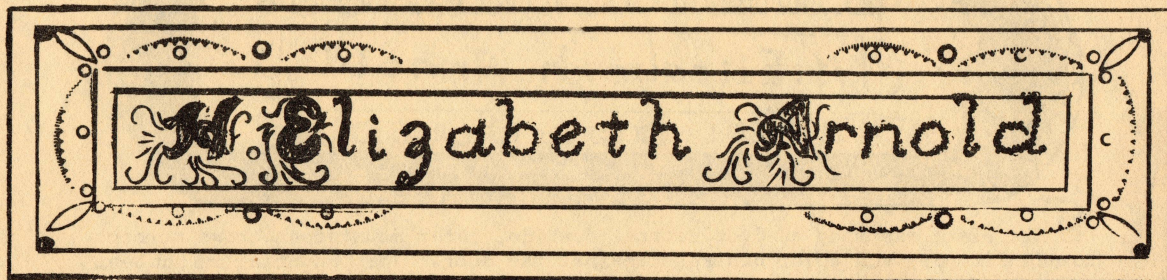

The finished plate never really satisfied me, though it served its purpose until a better one replaced it. It was while looking for a Christmas gift that a different Style, No 2, was developed

This time I used all capital letters. Again the plate was drawn on paper, spacing letters before completing boundary lines. 8-oz carving leather was chosen, which proved much more satisfactory as the finished plate did not need mounting.

With this style, letters were incised and decorative cuts added. A Seed Stamp provided periods following initials; while bargrounder filled in background. For border stamps, a Basket and Sunburst were alternated with a Fine Veiner paralleling them. In stamping a border I work from each end toward the centre along both top and bottom, in order to match spacing. When stamping was done, Inlay Dye was applied to the background and the whole plaque Antique finished

But since names vary in length, I found it necessary to try another method for a long name. Thus Style 3 came into existence

In this plate only initial capitals were incised. A short Bargrounder was used to stamp the inside of all letters. No incising was needed in lower case letters, as they were stamped in single line with Bargrounder. Decorative cuts surrounded capitals. Borders combined Long Veiner, Plain and Moroccan Seeders and Stamen at each corner. Again Inlay Dye was applied to letters and Antique applied over all

A variation of this style used Bargrounder on only lower case letters, initial capitals being incised and interior dress cuts used. Surrounding decorative cuts were still used around capitals

So far I cannot advise as to durability on outside doors. Any that I know of that are outside have not been exposed long enough to show effects of weather. Perhaps someone reading this article has had such experience and may have some advice to pass along on the matter of weather-proofing (*)

And now, good luck to all of you who will be making door plates. May you have as much pleasure out of them as I have had

(*) Neatsfoot oil, though it tends to darken russet finished leather, stands up well on such outdoor items as saddles, gun scabbards, surveyor's instrument cases. Weatherproofing applications need periodic renewing. (Ed)

CSCL Exhibition Reports

1st Canadian International Hobby Show, Toronto, February 6-14, 1953

Eight 12-hour days, 80 assistants and demonstrators working in three shifts, 155 articles on display, 14012 voting slips cast in the popular preference poll -- that is the story of our most ambitious and successful CSCL display to date. The continuous activity of voting and demonstrations always drew crowds, and much of the time the aisles were filled solidly

Visitors enjoyed watching CSCL members demonstrating: tooling, carving, dyeing and coloring, glovemaking and lacing. Other attending members gave information about the exhibits and the Society, and registered many new members

Hobby Show officials were so satisfied with our efforts that we have already been invited to exhibit in 1954. It is hoped all CSCL members will work toward exhibition pieces for this important event. Try for: 1) originality in design 2) imagination in choice of articles

Pieces exhibited were again chiefly from Ontario, but Saskatchewan was represented by Mrs Beatrice Baycroft, Lajord, and Mrs Gwyneth R Gale, Melfort; and Montreal by John Opariek and Endel Ruberg

Results of the popularity poll (below) will interest members who exhibited and assisted with the show. Special congratulations should be given Edith Roscoe, whose beautiful butterfly jewel box received the largest total vote

V Lára Russell of Ottawa donated the prize for the lucky draw from the voting slips. It was a shoulder bag, in which design and decorative motif had a fresh and original approach. The winner, Mr Edwin Dixon of Newmarket, is a naturalist and master taxidermist, examples of whose work are to be found throughout Canada and the United States. Mrs Dixon tools in leather, and both paint in oils. We are glad the purse fell into such appreciative hands

M'LADY FAIR Montreal, Mount Royal Hotel, Dec 2-4, 1952
(Arranged by Montreal Women's Club)

Specially invited as a feature display, 92 CSCL Travelling Exhibition and extra loan articles were enthusiastically received by the crowds attending the Fair. Demonstrations and voting kept interest high at all times

Your Exhibition Committee Chairman set up and handled the display, with the help of a new member, John Opariek, a young Ukranian now living in Montreal. Jessie Tyrell, Margaret Richardson and Deane Russell came from Ottawa to lend a hand, and three girls from Corbeil-Hooke, Inc. took turns attending during exhibition hours

The lucky draw, a carved handbag donated by Don MacKinnon, was much admired, and was won by Mrs A E Hanna, of Mount Royal. 934 votes cast placed the following articles in top rank:

The Travelling Exhibition has been in constant demand all winter, and is booked solidly until the end of April. Host groups continue to report successful showings and to express appreciation for the opportunity to see such excellent examples of contemporary Canadian leathercraftsmanship. After last year's showings in Central, Western and Eastern Canada, the following winter-spring itinerary may illustrate how our Society is widening its contacts through "Canadian Handmade in Leather" --

Pretrolia, High School; Kingston, Queen's University Museum; Almonte, Almonte Handicraft Guild; Timmins, Local Section CSCL; Iroquois Falls, High School; Winnipeg, Canadian Handicrafts Guild; Picton, High School; Tillsonburg, High School; Chatham, Kinsmen's Memorial Auditorium; St Thomas, Public Library; Fort William, Public Library; Port Arthur, Public Library; Welland, High School

It is planned to recall the Travelling Exhibition for summer months, when members will prepare new exhibits designed to offer still demonstrations of important leather decorating, finishing and assembly techniques. After the annual meeting, a new outline of Travelling Exhibition Policy will be circulated for the interest of host groups desiring to receive this educational display of contemporary Canadian decorative leathercraft

SECOND CALL

Leathercraftsmen desiring to have their work reviewed for possible showing in the 1953 Arts and Crafts Display to be sponsored by the Art Gallery of Toronto are urged to plan their pieces now

This all-Canadian exhibition will be judged critically and to highest standards

- Suggestions:
- try for simplicity in decoration
  - try hand-sewn and turned-edge construction
  - achieve a fine "leather finish"
  - offer only work of your own original designs

Full details will be sent all CSCL members by special circular after the Annual Meeting

FOURTH ANNUAL MEETING

All day Saturday, June 6, 40 Wellesley Street East, Toronto

Watch for detailed program in circular to be mailed all members three weeks before meeting date. Special program features include:

- colored slide films on contemporary Canadian Leathercraft
- a morning workshop period
- luncheon
- guest speaker Thor Hansen, leading illustrated discussion on "Designing for Canadian Leathercraft"
- group criticisms of members' work

A display of members' work will be set up for review and friendly group criticisms. All members are invited to bring one or more examples of recent leathercraft for this feature of the program

Members wishing to apply for Associate or Fellow rating are urged to prepare two large and two small articles for review by Board of Selection. Details of other requirements for Fellow and Associate standing listed in circular to be mailed membership soon

WORKSHOP TIPS

Question: What will prevent gusset edges from curling toward purse front after use for awhile?

Answer: Skive edges of gusset well. Do not skive purse front too thinly to weaken it, and only slightly in from edge. Likely pull of thickness of gusset plus lining is stronger than front edge of purse if front has been skived thin

When constructing, dampen skived gusset score line of flange deeply with tracer at bend; then bend up both sides of flange. While still damp form into permanent shape - to fit purse and stretch WELL on curves. Allow to dry fastened to purse front and back with clamps. Cut lining slightly smaller across than gusset so as not to include in lacing; cement to gusset and nick lining several times slightly where corner curves. This method should offset tendency for gussets to curl forward

Tip by Edith Roscoe

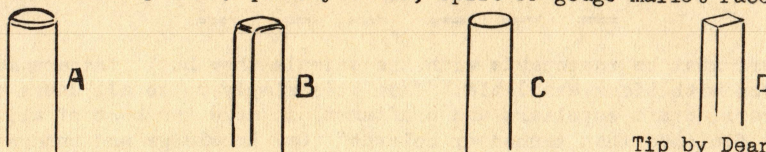

Question: How may "natural" purses be kept in original even color tones?

Answer : To keep natural or light-colored purse the same all-over color, unfasten clasp whenever purse is not in use. Better air circulation will help under-flap leather change color at same rate as exposed parts

Tip by Reta Larmour

Question: My last wooden mallet became very badly chipped after use for just a short time. Is there any way to prevent this?

Answer : Check carefully the striking ends of all stamping tools. Damage to striking surfaces of wood or rawhide mallets, can be considerably lessened by making sure all striking ends of stamping tools are ground or filed smooth and slightly convex or domed. (see A and B) Sharp square edges or perfectly flat top ends, quickly check, split or gouge mallet faces - C & D

Question: How may I prevent leather from shrinking after tooling?

Answer : Immerse leather in water (time according to weight or thickness) as for carving; let dry thoroughly; then dampen in usual way before tooling. Little shrinkage will occur, as leather will have been pre-shrunk

NEWS ITEM Margaret Jennings, London executive member, was honored recently by a commission from the Town of Tillsonburg, to make a leather cover for an album to be presented to the Rt Hon Vincent Massey, Governor General of Canada, on the occasion of his official visit there in March

Margaret bound the album in mission grain steerhide, with turned edges and padded covers. The decorative motif was the Tillsonburg crest and inscription "Tillsonburg 1925-53" colored in brown tones, with background left natural

Membership in the Society proved invaluable to Margaret on this occasion, since she knew exactly where to go for help. She felt that without Bob Muma's aid she would never have been able to do such an excellent job

Natural Marked Leathers

A well-nourished animal must have some fat and wrinkles in body and skin. A tendency, all for the good, is developing to educate wearers and buyers of shoes bags and other leathergoods, to consider such markings as part and parcel of what leather is. Take a crowd of men and women at a cattle show and all rave about the beauty of the animals. None are scrawny, all are fat. Every hide must reflect the general condition of the beasts

Cattlemen can't tell their animals to keep away from fences, briars or anything likely to mar their skins or hides. Nor can they get them to digest foods so as not to develop natural fat and growth wrinkles

Since packers must be reasonable with the animals they buy, tanners must do the best they can with hides available. Then it's simply up to all users of leather (manufacturers, craft suppliers and craftsmen) to make the best of all "leathers not further finished than tanned or colored" Our knowledge and understanding of leather, as well as our capacity for working with leather, will certainly be reflected in the uses to which we put this craft medium (Editor)
