Native Medicine Bag

Native American Technology and Art –
Learning how to make a Puzzle Pouch

1. Cut out the five pieces of the pattern A, B, C, D and E. Trace them onto leather and cut out the pieces. A softer hide works well for small pouches, deer hide being the best. Heavier elk hide might work well for larger pouches. If you want to increase the size of the pattern increase all pattern parts the same percentage.
 2. Line up and sew together pieces A & B (using either a whip stitch, a running stitch, or a blanket stitch). Sew along "seam 1" on the pattern (either sew with 'right sides' facing each other and then turn right-side out afterwards... or sew with right sides facing out, your choice!)
 3. Cut small slits in piece C as shown on the pattern -- an exacto knife works well for this -- just be careful not to cut these slits too large!
 4. Thread the thongs of piece A through the slits of piece C... (threading from the 'right side' to the 'wrong side') so that the wrong side of the flap C is laying face up against pattern piece A.
 5. Now thread the thongs of piece A through the slits of piece D (threading from the 'wrong side' to the 'right side') so that a flap hangs over both sides of the pouch... one flap of piece D should hang with piece D... and the other flap of piece D should hang on the other side with the existing flap of Piece B.
 6. Sew together piece C with the flap of the piece D along 'seam 2a' ... and continue sewing along 'seam 2b', attaching the flap of piece B with the flap of piece D.
 7. Gather together the ends of the thongs of piece A and sew them together... running the needle through the tip of each of the six thongs... Tie the ends of this thread together or knot well on either sides of the thong tips.
 8. Cover the gathered tips of the thongs of piece A with the 'hour glass shaped' piece E. Fold piece E in half at the narrowest point, and sew down one side of piece E, across the bottom (sewing through the fan of thongs from piece A), and up the last side of piece E.
- ... and now... for the solution!! To open the puzzle pouch, Lift flap C/D and pinch piece A just underneath the flap with your fingers... holding flap C/D with one hand, pull on the thongs of piece A so that they slide through the slits... pull the thongs all the way through the slits, and you will be able to fit your fingers between the thongs and into the puzzle pouch!

Loreen Manuel was a skilled leather crafter creating beautiful and unique pieces that warranted many CSCL ribbons and awards. Always modest about her talents and generous when sharing her skills, Loreen was a great friend to many. Her chocolate fudge was the best! She will be missed.
